

I am: Independent, Critical Thinker, Passionate, Creative, Worthy, Strong, Genuine, Intelligent

whats with the long face?

someone told me you didn't like me.

and who said that?

just the patriarchal values that seperate women based on their interests and persona -- which ends up dictating our lives for us, controls our bodies and freedom, ridicules us for existing, underestimates our intelligence, leaves us emotionally unhealthy, and pins us against each other until we forget who we are. ... when in reality we're all just individuals trying to coexist peacefully and meaningfully.

There is no reason for me not to like you. To be judged based off our looks is the outcome of others own insecurity. To be controlled is to show that we're something to be respected and taken seriously. I support you.

